

Zed, the class Leeds can't fit.

@zz.routine.test · 8,400 Instagram followers · Leeds kitchen studio

You teach sourdough from a small Leeds kitchen, and the people who can't get to your Saturdays are asking to learn from you online.

ESTIMATE · CONSERVATIVE CASE

£6,174 in 3 months

From one recorded online version of your Saturday class at £49, in its first three months.

Estimate: 1.5% of your 8,400 followers buy the course, about 126 people.

WHAT YOUR NUMBERS SAY

The demand is already in your DMs.

Your Saturdays sell out six weeks ahead and you can't add more of them. Everything below starts from that fact.

8,400

Instagram followers

3×

posts a week: shaping and scoring videos plus a weekly Q&A

~40

names on the class waitlist

What you sell today

- Saturday classes: 6 people at £85, two a month. Fully booked six weeks ahead.
- Printed starter guide: £12, about 25 a month.

Engagement rate and average likes weren't available in the public data for this audit.

What people keep asking

- An online version of the class, every week, from people outside Leeds.
- A recording of the class, asked for by several followers.
- How to keep a starter alive, hydration percentages, and why loaves come out flat.

Pillar one

Hands on the dough

Short videos of shaping and scoring: the steps people can't learn from a written recipe.

Pillar two

The weekly Q&A

Answers drawn from your DMs, which already tells you what a course and a membership need to cover.

Pillar three

Fixing the flat loaf

Starter care, hydration and flat loaves: the three problems your followers bring back again and again.

WHERE THE NUMBER COMES FROM

£6,174, step by step.

Three assumptions sit under this estimate: your follower count, a 1.5% conversion, and a 20% membership take-up. Each one is shown next to the line it drives.

Instagram followers	8,400
Your current count
Share who buy the course in the first three months	× 1.5%
Assumption: 1.5% conversion
Course buyers	126
$8,400 \times 1.5\% = 126$
Course price	× £49
Recorded online class
Course revenue, first three months	£6,174
$126 \times £49 \cdot \text{estimate}$

Buyers who join the membership	25
Assumption: 20% of 126 buyers = 25.2, rounded to 25
Membership price	× £15
Live Q&A plus a monthly bake-along
Membership, each month	£375/mo
$25 \times £15 \cdot \text{estimate}$

Why this is the cautious case. It counts only your existing followers, takes 1.5 in every 100 of them, and leaves out the 40 names already waiting for a Saturday seat. The membership is shown per month rather than added to the cover figure, because how long members stay is not yet known.

THE PRODUCT LADDER

From a £12 guide to your kitchen table.

Two new steps fill the gap between the printed guide and a Saturday seat, and neither one needs more of your Saturdays.

PRODUCT	WHO IT'S FOR	PRICE	REVENUE
Printed starter guide Selling now	Anyone starting their first starter	£12	£300/mo 25 × £12
Online course New · recorded class	People outside Leeds who ask for the class online	£49	£6,174 first 3 months, est.
Membership New · optional add-on	Course buyers who want ongoing help	£15/mo	£375/mo 25 members, est.
Saturday class Selling now · full	Local bakers who want hands-on teaching	£85	£1,020/mo 2 × 6 × £85

What the new steps add

Over the first three months the course and membership together come to about £7,299 (£6,174 plus 3 × £375), on top of what you sell now. That assumes the 25 members join in month one and stay; treat it as an estimate.

What stays the same

Your two Saturdays a month keep running at full price. The course doesn't replace them; it reaches the people who were never going to get a seat.

WHAT EACH OFFER HOLDS

The online course.

£49

One payment. The whole Saturday class, recorded, for anyone outside Leeds.

Your Saturday class, filmed properly, so someone in another city can bake the loaf you teach.

It covers what the class covers, in the order you teach it, and answers the three questions your DMs keep raising inside the lessons themselves.

- 01 Starter · building one, feeding it, and keeping it alive between bakes.
- 02 Mixing · hydration percentages explained with the dough in front of the camera.
- 03 Shaping · the step your videos already show best, slowed down and filmed from above.
- 04 Baking · scoring, the oven, and why loaves come out flat and how to stop it.

The promise

Bake the loaf from your Saturday class at home, with your starter alive and your loaf not flat.

FIRST STEP TO BUILD IT

Run the waitlist test on page 08. Once 100 people have signed up, film one Saturday class from start to finish, in the four parts above.

WHAT EACH OFFER HOLDS · CONTINUED

The membership.

£15_{/mo}

Optional, offered to course buyers. Estimate: 20% join, about 25 members.

The weekly Q&A you already answer from your DMs, done live for the people who bought the course.

It turns something you do for free each week into a small monthly income, and it keeps course buyers baking after the last lesson.

What's inside

- A live Q&A each month, for members' starter, hydration and shaping questions.
- A monthly bake-along: everyone bakes the same loaf with you, live.

The promise

You won't be left on your own with a flat loaf. Bring it to the next session and we'll work out why.

FIRST STEP TO BUILD IT

Leave it until the course is selling. Offer it to the first course buyers by email, and run the first bake-along with whoever joins. The live format means there's nothing to film in advance.

Why it matters for your time. You said you can't run more Saturdays because of your day job. The course is filmed once; the membership is two live sessions a month from your own kitchen.

LAUNCH PLAN

Test first, film second.

Three steps, in this order. Nothing gets built until your followers have told you, with their email address, that they want it.

WEEKS 1-2

Post the shaping clip and open a waitlist

A 60-second clip of the shaping step, with a caption asking who wants the full class online and a link to a waitlist form. The script is on the next page.

Target: 100 sign-ups in two weeks.

ONCE THE WAITLIST REACHES 100

Film the class properly

You've been meaning to. Film one class in four parts: starter, mixing, shaping, baking. Open the course to the waitlist first at £49.

AFTER THE FIRST BUYERS

Offer the membership

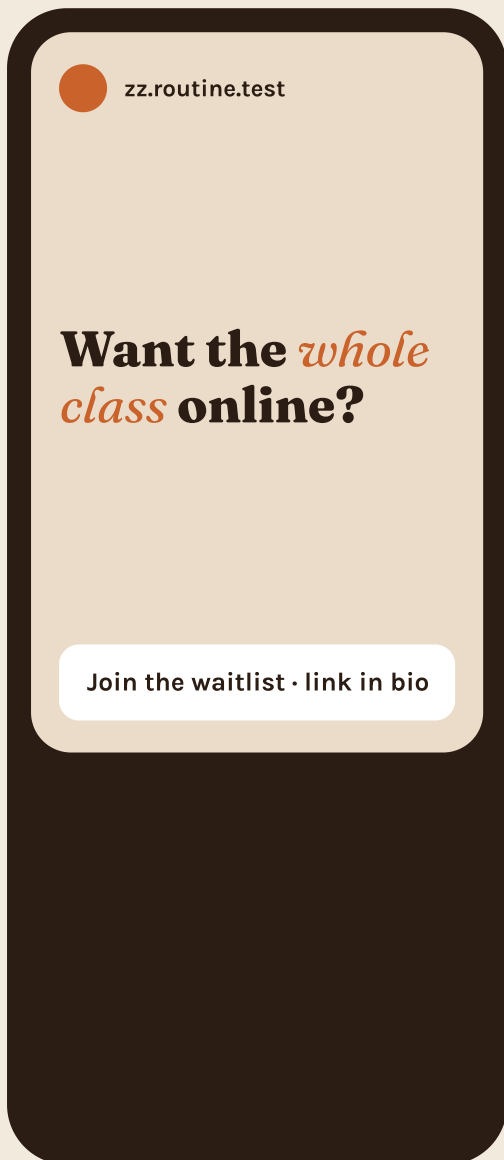

Invite course buyers to the £15 a month membership and run the first live Q&A and bake-along.

If the waitlist falls short of 100, that tells you something before you've spent a weekend filming. Ask the people who did sign up what they'd need from it, then decide.

THE FIRST POST

One reel to test the demand.

A 60-second shaping clip, in the format your followers already watch, with one question attached.

0-5S · ON SCREEN

Hands on the board, flour down. Text: “Want the whole class online?”

5-50S · THE SHAPING STEP

Shape one loaf, start to finish, the way you teach it on Saturdays. Voiceover: “This is the bit everyone asks about. Every Saturday I teach six people to do this, and every week someone outside Leeds asks if they can learn it too.”

50-60S · THE ASK

“I’ve been meaning to film the class properly. If you’d want it online, join the waitlist. Link in bio.”

CAPTION

Every week someone outside Leeds asks for an online version of my Saturday class. Saturdays are full, and I can’t run more of them.

So I’m thinking of filming the whole class: starter, mixing, shaping, baking.

If you’d want it, join the waitlist (link in bio). If 100 of you sign up in the next two weeks, I’ll film it.

WHAT TO DO NEXT

Start with the clip, not the camera.

1. Set up a simple waitlist form and put the link in your bio.
2. Post the shaping reel on page 08 with its caption.
3. Count the sign-ups after two weeks. At 100, film the class.

A free 15-minute call to plan the course and the waitlist. Reply to this DM and I'll walk you through the numbers and what to build first.

All revenue figures are estimates based on public data and the audit, resting on the stated assumptions: 8,400 followers, 1.5% course conversion and 20% membership take-up.

How this was made: I build automations, and I used AI for the analysis, which is why this took an evening rather than a fortnight.
